The Thirteenth of September, Kighteen hundred and Englis-two, T. Shawra. Gordon III; Carbo, October 11th, 180.

It is the bearing of a man towards his forws which oftentimes, more than any othows which oftentimes, more than any other ircumstance, promotes or obstructs his an rancement in life. Among the many governal unlities of mind and heart absolutely necessarily qualities of mind and heart absolutely necessary for a merchant to insure worldly success, there is no one the importance of which is more real, yet which at this is so generally underrated by many of our business menclerks and salesamen, as courtesy—that feelings of kindness, dignity and love for our fellows which expresses itself in pleasing manners. It is an undentable fact that many of us are unfortunate in not being the happy possessors by nature of this desirous and charming quality, good manners. For all such it is an imperative duty to study, to cultivate, and improve themselves in this qualification, by keeping a vigilant and watchful care over all their actions and transactions in every day life with their fellow beings. History is crowded with examples, showing that, as in literature, it is the delicate indefinable charm of style, not the thought, which makes a work immortal.

Emerson says: "Give a boy address and accomplishments, and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes wherever be goes, be has not the trouble of earning or owning them, they solled this to be transparent.

tery of palaces and fortunes wherever be goes; be has not the trouble of earning or owning them; they sollicit him to enter and possess. Among strangers, a good manner is the best letter of recommendation, for a grant deal depends upon first impressions, and those are favorable or unfavorable according to a man's bearing, as he is polite or awkward, shy or self-possessed. Manners, in lact, are minor merals, and a rude man is generally assumed to be a had man."

Lord Chesterfield wrote to his son, "You had better return a dropped fan genteelly than give a thousand pounds awkwardly; and you had better refuse a favor gracefully than grant it clumsily. All, your Greek can never advance you from Secretary to Envoy, or from Encoy with the likewise provided.

commany. All your Greek can never advance ou from Secretary to Envoy, or from Envoy o Embassador, but your address, your air, our manner, if good, may."

When we come to look into the history, past and present of some of our best and most suc-essful business men of the present day, we must be out of the present of pleasing. and that nine out of ten are men of pleasing manners, and that they owe in a great measure their success in life to this important trait of character, for by it they have made friends and customers, though they may not have had a dellar of capital to commence life with. Their good manners and pleasing address made capital for them, or brought it to them. As Chesterfield said of the Duke of Marlborough. "his charming manner often changed un enemy into a friend, and to be denied a favor by him was more pleasing that to receive one im was more pleasing than to receive or rote another man."—Held's Journal, Shaving the Face

Thirty years ago a few persons of foreign birth appeared in the streets with hair on the upper lip, and were objects of curiosity and sometimes of public ridicule. In 1500 some of the young swells of the metropolis began to wear moustaches, but for some time no clerk would venture to imitate them. In one case a merchant of Pine street, who had just engaged a clerk for twelve months, or during good behavior, discharged him for wearing a full beard, claiming that the adoption of the fashion laid the clerk open to discharges under the good-behavior clause to the contract. About the same time a number of leading merchants gave notice that they would employ nobody who wore hair on the upper lip. As late as 1851 the senior proprietor of this paper made his cashier shave off an incipient moustache, and soon after brought his son under the razor. In the church of Dr. Bethune, on Brocklyn Heights, an elder who suffering from a lane wrist, allowed his beard to grow rather than submit to a barber. The habit, beginning in necessity, continued on account of the increase of comfort which it afforded, and the elder

The result was laughable. Many the brethren called upon the paster to in upon doing away with such a scandal as full-bearded elder. Mexico's Men of Business.

The following is taken from an interest article in the February number of Horp Monthly: "It is perhaps thought that the we improvement in Mexico is to be effected foreigners entirely, the Mexican remaining raive, and allowing everything to be done him. The view is supported by the extent which the business of the country alread seen to be in the hands of foreigners. business and manufacturers are English. They have a somewhat Jewish rutation for thrift. They are enterprising, as administrators of the haciendas, often in rying the proprietors' daughters, and posseting themselves in their own right of the precities to which they were accredited as age.

Expenses of a Trip to Europe

Expenses of a Trip to Europe.

Mr. Falton, of the Baltimore American, spent seventy days in a trip to and in Europe and back, accompanied by four persons, three ladies, and he gives this pressic information, which may be of value:

"Prior to leaving Baltimore we planned the whole of our trip, calculating to be absent for seventy days. We started on the 7th day of July, and reached Baltimore on our return on the 15th day of September, having been precisely seventy days absent. Of this period we were twenty-three days on the ocean—three days longer than expected-leaving forty-seven days for the tour, which were spent as follows. In Liverpool one day, in London five days, in Paris ten days, at Vichy Springs three days, at Geneva four days, at Berne one day, at Interlaken three days, at Jurich two days, at Lucerne two days, at Lake Constance three days, at Falls of Bhine one day, at Strasburg two days, at Mayence one day, down the Rhine oue day, at Cologne two days, at Brussels three days, at Antweep three days. The entire cost of this tour of seventy days, from Baltimore and back to Baltimore, for a party of five, three of whom were ledies, was $1,584.20, being for each of the party $377, or about $5.45 per day. This was for all manner of travelling expenses, including those of sight seeing, carriage hire, operas, theater concetts, fees, etc. We travelled first class in the cars everywhere except in Germany, and stopped at the best hotels, in no way stiming expenses. We were desirous of ascertaining expenses. exactly for what such a summer trip could be accomplished, and the accounts were kept strictly. Of course all of the party spent considerable in the purchase of whatever took their fancy in all the cities through which we passed. But these expenditures were no part of the travelling expenses. It may be proper to add that we were all persistent water drinkers, and although everywhere told that water was unbealthy and ice positively injurious, we stuck to our favorite beverage, using ice when we could get it, and we return home improved in health and invigorated by our journey."
